MEDICAL WRITING
A Unique Partnership with Emerging, Mid-Market, Biotechnology Sponsor

Learn how our Medical Writing team developed a partnership with a mid-sized, biotech company after authoring support for one Clinical Study Protocol.

THE CHALLENGE
The Clinical Medical Writing team worked on developing a Clinical Study Protocol (CSP) for a Boston-based biotechnology Sponsor.

- The Sponsor faced the challenge of producing a high volume of regulatory documents in a short time, without an in-house team of medical writers.
- The Sponsor's shifting priorities and conflicting deadlines, combined with several concluded clinical trials full of uninterpreted data, made it difficult for them to produce the documents.
- Additionally, due to multiple points of contact from legacy project team members due to staff turnover, the overall communication process was not well organized.

Quick Facts Check

SPONSOR PROFILE

- Mid-sized, biotech company based in Boston
- Founded 2015
- Publicly traded
- ~200 employees

SPONSOR GOALS

- Establish approach for GCP-related documents
- Adopt a standardized approach
- Adopt a standardized review process
- Adopt a standardized communication process

OUR SOLUTION
A structured approach for increased efficiency for authoring and managing GCP compliant clinical documents, including Clinical Study Reports (CSRs), CSPs, and Protocol Amendments (PAs) were created.

The following solutions were developed by the Advanced Clinical Medical Writing team:

- Common template for CSRs and CSPs.
- Use of industry-accepted guidance on reporting results in all CSRs.
- Shell creation followed by draft document generation.
- Defined compilation process for CSRs for eCommon Technical Document submission.
- Key messaging meetings for CSRs to align on data presentation, analysis, and overall conclusions.
- Reduction in number of review cycles.

OUTCOME

The Sponsor met its corporate goal of completing the outstanding regulatory documents by the end of Q4 in 2020.

The Sponsor now has the medical writing tools and procedures in place to ensure they can quickly produce a large amount of various clinical documents with confidence.

The Happy Client!
Thank you for working so hard with us to complete these documents. Your efforts are very much appreciated.
